LEGAL GUIDELINES FOR THE NATURAL HEALTH CARE PRACTITIONER

*Many are told that they cannot practice their natural healing modality without state licensing and those that are licensed are often told they cannot offer treatments that are helpful to their patients because their boards do not approve. In fact, if you understand how to set up your practice properly and you understand the basics of contract and constitutional law you can increase your protection from state interference in your practice.

Former practicing attorney turned natural health care practitioner, Jim Jordan, JD, CNC will be presenting a full-day workshop on the legal guidelines for the natural health care practitioner. This workshop is a must for all alternative health care practitioners, especially unlicensed practitioners.

Topics covered (you can implement them immediately in your own practice):

- Advantages/Disadvantages of Practice Options for the unlicensed practitioner and licensed practitioners who want to operate freely from outdated and potentially dangerous licensing board standards
- How to avoid legal conflicts with state agencies by learning how to communicate and conduct your practice in a way that avoids restricted legal terms and behavior
- How enumerated rights in the United States Constitution can be argued to protect your right to offer natural health care services and your client's right to receive your services
- How un-enumerated rights referred to in the United States Constitution and upheld by Supreme Court decisions can be argued to protect your right to offer natural health care services and your client's right to receive the healthcare services and supplements of their choosing.
- Sample Consent, Disclosure, Disclaimer and Privacy forms that can increase your legal protection
- Advantages/Disadvantages of professional licensing
